THIRTIETH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

Sunday

How would you like to be treated?
Do that to others.

Why did Jesus tell us to love our neighbors as ourselves? It's interesting that every major world religion, east or west, has a saying like this. How should we treat other people? Well, how would you like to be treated? Do that to others. There is stark simplicity here. There is something in the human heart that knows what to do. The trick is doing it.

The Book of Exodus gives some practical advice. Do you know what it's like to sleep without blankets? How could you put someone else through that? Even if he owed you the blanket, let him have it. What if the situation were switched? How would you react to someone who was this generous to you? Think about this as a lender working with someone who is needy, basically honest, and trustworthy. (Didn't you think so when you made the loan?) Who is more likely to feel gratitude toward you and repay the debt than the person you treat with compassion? Where else might this relationship then go?

The toughest part of this advice is that we are meant to apply it to "aliens." How do we react to people we don't know? We can reflect on this in the same way. What is it like when I'm the outsider?

There is a deep foundation here in the realization that we know how we ought to be treated and how we ought to treat others. Each of us is made in the image of God. We are connected to others who are made in that image. The challenge is basic. Can I see the image of God in the other? We are told by Christ to look for it.

Why did Jesus tell us to love our neighbors as ourselves? Because we already know what to do.

Dear Padre

Why are there two Christmas stories?

I just found out there are two versions of the Christmas story in the Bible. How can that be?

Curious

Dear Curious,

There are two Christmas stories in the Gospels: one is in Matthew and the other in Luke. They differ on some details but at their hearts, the teaching is the same. Both tell us Mary is a virgin engaged to Joseph but not yet living with him, and both tell us Jesus is conceived through the power of the Holy Spirit. Both have Jesus born in Bethlehem.

In Matthew, the angel announces the birth of Jesus to Joseph; in Luke, the announcement is made to Mary. Jesus is named by Joseph in Matthew and by Mary in Luke.

The biggest difference involves the Christmas visitors. Matthew's Magi were educated Gentiles from a pagan country. They worshiped Jesus and brought gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh, showing us at the start of the Gospel that Jesus is King, Priest, and Savior. Luke is always partial to the poor, so he has shepherds rather than Magi witness to Christ.

The Christmas stories are different because the authors and their audiences were different. But there's no need to get lost in the details. Read both accounts, and allow God's grace to deepen your faith.
